

NUT

My paper is a kind of nursery for authors, and some who have made a good figure here, will hereafter flourish under their own names.

4. Place where young children are nursed and brought up. Addison's Guard.

Were stol'n. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
You see before you the spectacle of a Plantagenet, who hath been carried from the nursery to the sanctuary, from the sanctuary to the direful prison, from the prison to the hand of the cruel tormentor, and from that hand to the wide wilderness; for so the world hath been to me. Bacon.

Forthwith the devil did appear,
Not in the shape in which he plies
At miss's elbow when she lies;
Or stands before the nursery doors,
To take the naughty boy that roars. Prior.

They have public nurseries, where all parents are obliged to send their infants to be educated. Gull. Trav.
5. The place or state where any thing is fostered or brought up, from a nursery of children, or whence any thing is to be removed from a nursery of trees. Spenser on Ireland.

This keeping of cows is of itself a very idle life, and a fit nursery for a thief. Spenser on Ireland.
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd from fruitful Lombardy. Shakespeare.
A luxurious court is the nursery of diseases; it breeds them, it encourages, nourishes, and entertains them. L'Estrange.

A nursery excels its head;
Where queens are form'd and future heroes bred;
Where unskill'd actors learn to laugh and cry. Dryden.
NURSING. n. f. [from nurse.] One nursed up; a fondling.

Then was she held in sovereign dignity,
And made the nursing of nobility. Spenser.
I was his nursing once, and choice delight,
His destin'd from the womb. Mill. Agonistes.
In their tender nonage, while they spread
Their springing leaves and lift their infant head,
Indulge their childhood, and the nursing spare. Dryden.

NURTURE. n. f. [contracted from nurture, French.]
1. Food; diet.
For this did th' angel twice descend?
Ordain'd thy nurture holy, as of a plant
Select and sacred. Milton's Agonistes.

2. Education; institution. Little used.
She should take order for bringing up of wards in good nurture, not suffer them to come into bad hands. Spenser.
The thorny point
Of bare distress, hath ta'en from me the shew
Of smooth civility; yet am I inland bred,
And know some nurture. Shakespeare. As you like it.

To NURTURE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To educate; to train; to bring up.
Thou broughtest it up with thy righteousness, and nurturest it in thy law; and reformedst it with thy judgment. 2 Esdr. viii. 12.

He was nurtured where he had been born in his first rudiments, till the years of ten.
When an insolent despoiler of discipline, nurtured into impudence, shall appear before a church governour, severity and resolution are that governour's virtues. South.

2. To nurture up; to bring by care and food to maturity.
They suppose mother earth to be a great animal, and to have nurtured up her young offspring with a conscious tenderness. Bentley's Serm.

To NURTURE. v. a. To fondle; to cherish. Corrupted from nurture. Ainsl.
NUT. n. f. [hnut, Saxon; noot, Dutch; noix, Fr.]

1. The fruit of certain trees; it consists of a kernel covered by a hard shell. If the shell and kernel are in the center of a pulpy fruit, they then make not a nut but a stone.
One chanc'd to find a nut
In the end of which a hole was cut,
Which lay upon a hazel-root,
There scatter'd by a squirrel;
Which out the kernel gotten had;
When quoth this Fay, dear queen be glad,
Let Oberon be ne'er so mad,
I'll set you safe from peril. Drayt. Nymphid.

Nuts are hard of digestion, yet possess some good medicinal qualities. Arbutnot on Aliments.
2. A small body with teeth, which correspond with the teeth of wheels.

The force of this faculty may be more conveniently used by the multiplication of several wheels, together with nuts belonging unto each, that are used for the roasting of meat. Wilkin's Mathem. Magick.

Clocks and jacks, though the screws and teeth of the wheels and nuts be never so smooth, yet if they be not oiled, will hardly move. Roy on the Creation.
NUTBROWN. adj. [nut and brown.] Brown like a nut kept long. Young and old come forth to play,

NUT

Till the live-long daylight fail,
Then to the spicy nutbrown ale. Milton's Poem.

When this nutbrown sword was out,
With stomach huge he laid about. Hudibras, p. 1.
Two milk-white kids run frisking by her side,
For which the nutbrown lads, Erithacis,
Full often offer'd many a savoury kiss. Dryden.

King Hardicute, midst Danes and Saxons stout,
Carous'd in nutbrown ale, and din'd on grout. King.
NUTCRACKERS. n. f. [nut and crack.] An instrument used to enclose nuts and break them by pressure.

He cast every human feature out of his countenance, and became a pair of nutcrackers. Addison's Spectator.
NUTGALL. n. f. [nut and gall.] Excrecence of an oak. In vegetable excretions, maggots terminate in flies of constant shapes, as in the nutgalls of the outlandish oak. Brown.

NUTHATCH. } n. f. A bird.
NUTJOBBER. } n. f. A bird.
NUTPECKER. } n. f. A bird.
NUTHOOK. n. f. [nut and hook.] A stick with a hook at the end to pull down boughs that the nuts may be gathered. Shakespeare. Henry IV.

NUTMEG. n. f. [nut and mugit, French.]
The nutmeg is a kernel of a large fruit not unlike the peach, and separated from that and from its investient coat, the mace before it is sent over to us; except that the whole fruit is sometimes sent over in preserve, by way of sweet-meat or as a curiosity. The nutmeg is of a roundish or oval figure, of a compact or firm texture, and its surface furrowed: it is of an extremely agreeable smell and an aromatick taste.

There are two kinds of nutmeg; the male which is long and cylindrical, but it has less of the fine aromatick flavour than the female, which is of the shape of an olive. The Dutch import the nutmegs and mace from the East-Indies, and supply all Europe with them. The tree which produces them is not unlike our pear-tree in its manner of growth: its leaves, whether green or dried, have, when bruised, a very fragrant smell; and the trunk or branches, cut or broken off, yield a red liquor like blood. This tree is carefully cultivated.

But that which produces the male nutmeg grows wild in the mountainous parts of the Moluccas. Nutmeg is much used in our foods, and is of excellent virtues as a medicine. Hill.
The second a dry and hofculous coat, commonly called mace; the fourth a kernel included in the shell, which lieth under the mace, is the same we call nutmeg. Brown's V. Br.

I to my pleasant gardens went,
Where nutmegs breathe a fragrant scent. South.
NUTSHELL. n. f. [nut and shell.] The hard substance that incloses the kernel of the nut.

I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
A fox had me by the back, and a thousand pound to a nutshell, I had never got off again. L'Estrange.

It seems as easy to me, to have the idea of space empty of body, as to think of the hollow of a nutshell without a kernel. Locke.
NUTTREE. n. f. [nut and tree.] A tree that bears nuts; hazle.

Of trees you shall have the nuttree and the oak. Pendemon.
Like beating nuttrees, makes a larger crop. Dryden.
NUTRICATION. n. f. [nutricatio, Lat.] Manner of feeding or being fed.

Besides the teeth, the tongue of this animal is a second argument to overthrow this airy nutrition. Brown.
NUTRIMENT. n. f. [nutrimentum, Latin.] That which feeds or nourishes; food; aliment.

This slave
Has my lord's meat in him,
Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment? Shakespeare.
The stomach returns what it has received, in strength and nutriment, diffused into all the parts of the body. South.

Does not the body thrive and grow,
By food of twenty years ago?
And is not virtue in mankind,
The nutriment that feeds the mind? Swift's Miscell.

NUTRIMENTAL. adj. [from nutriment.] Having the qualities of food; alimental.
By virtue of this oil vegetables are nutrimental, for this oil is extracted by animal digestion as an emulsion. Arb.

NUTRITION. n. f. [from nutritio, nutre, Lat. nutrition, Fr.] The act or quality of nourishing, supporting strength, or encreasing growth.
New parts are added to our substance to supply our continual decayings; nor can we give a certain account how the aliment is so prepared for nutrition, or by what mechanism it is so regularly distributed. Glanv. Scis. c. iii.

The obstruction of the glands of the mesentery is a great impediment to nutrition; for the lymph in those glands is a necessary constituent of the aliment before it mixeth with the blood.
Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot. Pope.

NUZ

NUTRITIOUS. adj. [from nutris, Latin.] Having the quality of nourishing.

O may'st thou often see
Thy furrows whiten'd by the woolly rain. Philips.
Nutritious! secret nitre lurks within.
The heat equal to incubation is only nutritious; and the nutritious juice itself resembles the white of an egg in all its qualities. Arbutnot on Aliments.

NUTRITIVE. adj. [from nutris, Latin.] Nourishing; nutritive; alimental.
NUTRITURE. n. f. [from nutris, Latin.] The power of nourishing.

Never make a meal of flesh alone, have some other meat with it of less nutriture. Harvey on Consump.
To NUZZLE. v. a. [This word, in its original signification, seems corrupted from nurse; but when its original meaning was forgotten, writers supposed it to come from nozzle or nose, and in that sense used it.]

1. To nuzzle; to foster.
Old men long nuzzled in corruption, scorning them that would seek reformation. Sidney.

NYS

2. To go with the nose down like a hog.
He charged through an army of lawyers, sometimes with sword in hand, at other times nuzzling like an eel in the mud. Arbutnot's John Bull.

Sir Roger shook his ears, and nuzzled along, well satisfied that he was doing a charitable work.
The blessed benefit, not there confin'd,
Drops to the third, who nuzzles close behind. Pope.

NYMPH. n. f. [νύμφη; nymphas, Lat.]
1. A goddess of the woods, meadows, or waters.
And as the moisture which the thirsty earth
Sucks from the sea, to fill her empty veins,
From out her womb at last doth take a birth,
And runs a nymph along the grassy plains. Davies.

2. A lady. In poetry.
This resolve no mortal dame,
None but those eyes cou'd have o'erthrown;
The nymph I dare not, need not name. Waller.
Nys. [A corruption of ne is.] None is; not is. Obsolete.
Thou findest fault, where nys to be found,
And buidest strong work upon a weak ground. Spenser.
